Parade was particularly grateful that they did not draw one of these baking, blistering days which take the units of a parade's strength.

IDEAL WEATHER.
The comfortable temperature made it easier for people, especially the women and children, to wait along the parade route. It was necessary to be on hand in good season if one wanted to get a front-row position.

Householders living along the line of the parade had no trouble finding guests today. A window seat along the route was the finest hospitality one could offer a friend.

The holiday visitors from all over the metropolitan district, who swarmed into Charlestown to see the parade, studied the route and chose the viewing that seemed best to them, unless they were fortunate enough to be in the honorary rose-parties.

ROUTE OF PARADE.
The approximate route of the parade was as follows:

Start at Bunker Hill and Main streets at 2 1/2 o'clock. Bunker Hill street to Marion street, through Marion street to Fulton street, to Tufts street, to Bunker Hill street, to Washington street, to North street, to Cambridge street, to Seaver street and Gardner street, to Sullivan square, to Main street, to Bunker Hill street, and then south through the city, east and south side of Washington square, where the parade is reviewed by the chief marshal and staff.

The parade was arranged under direction of the city marshal, Benjamin J. McLaughlin, chief of the City Council, and John F. Dwyer, director of public celebrations.

Michael S. Conner, of the Franklin association, was chief marshal of the parade. For his chief of staff he had Lieutenant Andrew J. Conner, of the Charlestown Artillery Company of the militia.

REGULARS IN LINE.
The parade was figured to show about 5,000 men. The right of the parade was given to the United States Regular Coast Artillery Corps.

While the thousands of spectators were forming in the crowded lines on the sidewalks the parade line was moving with the following order:

ROSTER OF PARADE.

NEWS SOURCES GAGGED.

The seizure of the Bureau of Information and of the telephone office of Juarez last night, which effectively gagged the news-sources of Northern Mexico, was accomplished by soldiers under Colonel Tomas Urbina, military commander of Juarez, and a troop of Villa portia.

The officers in charge of the bureau and the office were Carranza men. They were ousted without ceremony. The incoming soldiers, entering without warning, ordered the bureau men to leave.

Abreu, who was in charge of the bureau, not to touch a paper. The Juarez office had already been taken. Abreu sat rooted in his chair if ordered from the bureau.

It was immediately announced that a message would be allowed to pass out over the wires unless they had been approved by Villa himself.

An officer destroyed by Villa himself. The custom house and the treasury department were seized immediately.

Villa, it was reported in El Paso, seized several days ago, but Carranza refused to accept the resignation.

He sent a "round robin" to Carranza protesting against allowing Villa to resign, and vowing they would accept no other leader.

In Juarez it is reported that while the Villa agents are denying any role in the seizure of the bureau, the Villa agents are denying any role in the seizure of the bureau.

HIDE FACTS ON ATTACK UPON GIRL

Secrecy maintained by prominent persons interested in the case is hampering the Beverly police in their investigation of the mysterious attack upon Miss Rose Morrison, twenty-two, who is today reported to be near death in a Boston hospital.

The young woman was employed as a domestic in the home of Neal Hancock, at Beverly Farms. She was on the West Beach, at the edge of the Hancock estate, with a young man when struck with a broom. She has lost the sight of one eye and may be stricken blind as a result of her injuries. The shock is reported to have left the young woman very weak.

The Hancock family refuses to discuss the case and orders have been issued to the servants not to say anything about it. The case has aroused much interest in Beverly and the police are urged to take action. Members of the Hancock family, who are looking after the needs of Miss Morrison, are reported to have asked the police to drop the investigation.

Miss Morrison and the young man who was with her now declare she was not the victim of an assault but was accidentally struck by the broom which was thrown by a man in a pose. This is contrary to the first reports of the case, told by neighbors of the Hancock and is not given credence by the police.

The extent of the young woman's injuries do not bear out her explanation. The broom struck her across the face with crushing force. The right eyeball was ruptured by the blow which caused a wound four inches long over the eye and also lacerated the left eye.

The name of Miss Morrison's employer has been kept secret. The report that Miss Hancock was the basis of a premature attack upon the young woman is being investigated by the police. The hope of establishing the identity of the alleged assailant is remote as Miss Morrison said her friend told the broom was hurled at the young woman in the darkness and they did not see her assailant.

Man Convicted of Attack on Girl of 14

George M. Salvage, alias Holt, alias Boston, accused of attacking fourteen-year-old Gladys Crook, was convicted by a jury in the last Cambridge court in less than ten minutes. Salvage has been sentenced to three other charges. He will be tried on one of the charges in the court tomorrow. Salvage is several months ago after falling from a "Moose" Trolley with a piece of concrete. He was arrested after he had walked in the city at Fort Sumner, N.Y.

Jordan Marsh Dines 700 Club Members

Seven hundred boys and girls of the Boston Club, which is composed of the younger members of Jordan Marsh Company, were given a banquet by the company in the big banquet hall in the building. The youthful guests, whose ages run from fourteen to seventeen, listened after the dinner to brief remarks by Dr. Franklin B. Levy, superintendent of schools. He complimented them on their high standard and urged them to pay special attention to the course in salesmanship.

Miss Helen Gavin played popular piano music, with the boys and girls joining in the choruses. There were solos by Catherine Glennon, Oliver Melian, George Ates and Larry McCable, who also told some stories. Benjamin Sampson contributed a piano solo.

Your Summer Corsets

Should be cool, comfortable and rustless, as well as correct figure moulding. As the days grow warmer, perhaps you will wish to renew your corset—if so, you may find your ideal of what a summer corset should be in

Warner's
Rust-Proof

You may confidently depend upon the Warner as a Summer corset—the bones will not rust or break and the fabric cannot tear.

Warner's Rust-Proof is a cool corset—because made of the right material properly boned and carefully finished.

You only feel a Warner Corset for its comfortable support—and you have the satisfaction of knowing that your figure lines are correct.

Warner's Corsets are not expensive—1.00, 1.50, 2.00 and 3.00 and good value for the money.

You can wash your Warner Corset as easily as a shirtwaist. Scrub it on a washboard as you would muslin. We advise only that you remove the hose supporters, as water affects the elastic webbing.
